Teller's Indian Policy Meeting General Approval.

Young's Plan for Penetration of Polar Regions.

Some of Arthur's Selections for the Tariff Commission.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The president said to a friend yesterday that the most difficult appointments he had yet been called upon to make were members of the tariff commission, as he appreciated the necessity for the immediate selection of the commissioners. It is believed the president has abandoned all idea of giving special interests representations on the commission. There are only nine commissioners to be chosen, and it would be impossible, without making invidious distinctions, to select men representing special branches of industry. It is settled that a majority of the commission will be protectionists, probably of a moderate order. The chairman of the committee is likely to be ex-Secretary Kirkwood, of Iowa. He favors a tariff for revenue only, but it is thought his general reputation for fairness and his identity with the agricultural interests of the west will make him a desirable member of the commission. It has been practically decided to make Edward Atkinson, of Boston, the great authority on textiles, a member of the commission, although it is possible that a change may be made in New England's representation before the nominations are sent to the senate. The south, middle states, northwest, and probably the southwest, will be represented. Although the middle states may get a preponderance of the commissioners, the Pacific coast will not, as your correspondent is at present advised, be represented on the commission.

YOUNG'S POLAR SCHEME.

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Graphic's Washington special says: Mister Lucien Young, of the navy, who desires to go to the Arctic regions, under the provisions of Calkins' bill, says his plan is entirely feasible, and will incur no special risk of loss of life. He proposes to keep near the shore; he would make depots for supplies, in case of retreat, one on the western coast of Greenland, and another further north at Lady Franklin bay; he would then keep up the Greenland coast, until he struck the northern limits of navigation, and stop, with the ship to be base of supplies. He would then send out parties on land, and if the end of the land was reached, he would on the ice pack, establish small depots. This would be done during the fall and winter, so that next spring the party could make a dash for the pole. The line of depots left the fall previous, would insure protection against starvation, and enable them to travel without being encumbered by stores. He has the opinion of various travelers that his plan is the most feasible devised so far, for the successful penetration of polar regions. He expects to find a more moderate climate at the pole than for some distance south of it.

TELLER'S COURSE APPROVED.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The Journal's Washington correspondent says: Mr. Teller's course relating to Indians is meeting with general approval, and it is believed life in the Indian country will be rendered more nearly safe under his course than ever before.

BLAINE AND THE STALWARTS.

It is said Blaine is supporting Senator Mitchell in his revolt against the stalwarts in Pennsylvania and that he will be also heard from in the canvass in Ohio, New York and many other states, making things lively for stalwarts generally.

CONFIRMATIONS.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Roland Worthington, collector of customs at Boston and Charlestown; John F. Gowey, of Ohio, register of the land office at Olympia, W. T.; Robert Lowery, of Iowa, receiver of public moneys, Huron, Dakota.

THE DAY'S WORK IN THE HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Proceedings in the house to-day under suspension of the rules were not fruitful of important results. A bill of consequence to farmers particularly was passed, protecting innocent purchasers of patents from wrongs that are now perpetrated upon them. Salesmen make a regular business of going through the country selling patented inventions, and the owners of the patents follow them collecting royalties under threat of suits in United States courts for the use of the inventions. When the bill passed by the house to-day becomes a law it will be impossible to bring suits of the character indicated against the innocent purchaser of patents. The bill introduced by Strait, of Minnesota, to reorganize the militia of the states in a national guard was defeated. The committee on private land claims dropped the McGarrahan case, but presented a bill to confirm the Cañon De Chama Mexican grant in New Mexico. The history of other grants of this kind, notably the Maxwell grant in the same territory, led the house to regard this with some suspicion. Mr. Springer showed that it contained 472,000 acres of land. The evidence before the committee had been ex parte of necessity, and it would be unwise to to pass so important a bill under a suspension of the rules. The bill was rejected, 41 to 124.

HOUSE PROCEEDINGS.

Under suspension of the rules the house by 155 to 48 passed a bill that no action for damages for infringements on patents shall be sustained for use of any patented article when it appears on trial that defendant purchased such article for a valuable consideration in the open market.

Several motions to suspend the rules and pass bills were made by order of committees and were rejected.

Lynch introduced a bill to repeal section 2020 of the revised statutes, relative to the appointment and duties of supervisors of election. Section 2020 provides that supervisors shall have no authority to make arrests or perform any other duties than to witness election proceedings and the making of returns. The bill also requires United States supervisors, in their reports to the chief supervisor, to report all violations of the act, and gives the United States district attorney free access to the reports to obtain information upon which to institute criminal prosecutions against any persons charged with violating the act. Referred.

The committee on pensions informed the house that a deficiency appropriation of $10,000,000 to meet June payments of army pensions should be made available by the 25th inst. Adjourned.

SENATE PROCEEDINGS.

A joint resolution was introduced for an international convention to recommend the establishment of a standard meridian for reckoning longitude and time.

Morrill presented an amendment to the house bonded distilled spirits bill in the form of a substitute for that measure.

Beck addressed the senate on the house bonded distilled spirits bill. Waiving all matters connected with the Windom investigation, he proceeded to argue the justice, fairness and honesty of the measure, which he claimed would promote the interests alike of distillers, dealers and the government. Beck said if the senate had constitutional power, to reduce the tax on distilled spirits to fifty cents a gallon he would gladly support the amendment to that effect, believing a reasonably low taxes produced the greatest revenues. Referring to the so-called whiskey ring he read a telegram and letter from H. H. Schufeldt, president of the United States Distillers and Liquor Dealers' association, addressed to G. C. Wharton, their attorney at Washington, stating that funds collected by the Western Export association were all paid to exporters of surplus alcohol to cover their loss.

Morrill in opposition to the bill said the evil of which holders of spirits now complain would be aggravated by the pending measure.

Windom, mover of the impending investigation into alleged corruption in connection with the bill, replied to Beck's reference to that matter.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Shiphord is summoned to appear before the foreign affairs committee Wednesday.

In the senate a favorable report has been made for a public building at Council Bluffs.

The president has approved the bill providing for the sale of lands of the Miami Indians, Kansas.

The senate passed a bill to enable California to take lands in lieu of the 16th and 37th sections, found to be mineral lands.

Total values of exports of domestic breadstuffs from the United States, for ten months, ended April 30th, was $157,546,126.

The movement of standard silver dollars for the week ending May 13 was 17,500 against 140,400 for the corresponding period of last year.

Judge Wylie directed the grand jury to receive as evidence certain reports submitted by Woodward, special agent in the star route cases, and his statements concerning them.

The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill is completed and will be reported to the house in a few days. The sundry civil bill is not yet finally completed.

The following nominations were made today: W. A. Maurice, district of Columbia, assistant attorney general of the United States; William M. Redpath, Indian agent for Indians of the Yankton agency, Dakota Territory.

In the house Robinson offered a resolution requesting the president to inform the house whether certain official papers recently published, regarding the imprisonment of American citizens in British prisons had been received at the state department, and what answer had been given thereto.

The death of J. Q. Smith, contestant of the sent of Shelley, democrat, of the fourth district of Alabama, will not quiet Shelley's claim to the seat. The sub-committee of the committee on elections has decided that Smith was elected by 250 majority, and they recommend the adoption of a resolution by the house that Shelley be unseated and a new election be ordered.

United States Marshal Russell, of the western district of Texas, was arrested here to-day for presenting fraudulent expense accounts in connection with transportation of prisoners. He travelled on free railway passes and charged for full fare, and also charged for guards never employed. It is understood several deputy marshals and some private banks are implicated in this fraud on the government.

The Army of the Cumberland to Garfield.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The society of the Army of the Cumberland proposes a popular contribution on Decoration Day towards the erection in Washington of a statue to the late President Garfield, who was so conspicuous a member of that army. Contributions may be made through the posts and post-masters sent directly to Lieutenant General Sheridan, Chicago, or H. C. Corbin, assistant adjutant general, United States army, at Washington.

IRELAND'S TRAGEDY.

The Murders Ireland's Answer to England's Pacification.

Earl Spencer Included in the Assassins' Plot.

Police Making no Progress in the Case.

PARNELL'S PRINCIPLES.

LONDON, May 15.—In the commons Parnell read a letter he wrote to O'Shea, home rule member for County Clare, before his release and which is to the effect that reforms in the law in regard to arrears of rent, purchase and leases are necessary, and that on the completion thereof the land league would do all possible to suppress outrages in Ireland. Forster asked that the whole letter be read. O'Shea then read a paragraph omitted by Parnell, stating that if the reforms specified were made land leaguers might act cordially with liberals in support of liberal principles. The reading was received with cheers from the opposition bench.

MURDERED FOR POLITICAL PURPOSE.

All controversy as to whether the assassins really intended to murder Lord Cavendish has ceased, now that it is universally understood that he was deliberately selected as a victim. The latest intelligence indicates the belief of the police that Earl Spencer, also, would have been murdered had the opportunity favored. Nobody longer denies that the assassinations were planned for a distinct political purpose. This was the Irish answer to England's latest message of peace. Mr. Parnell's swift assertion that the murders were directed against his new policy is considered to prove, if true, that the leadership of the active party has passed from his hands. The English are disposed to believe Mr. Parnell's present abhorrence of the crime; nevertheless, they hold him responsible for the murder as the culmination of a long series of assassinations which he failed to condemn. His appearance in the house on Monday in the character of a mourner evoked a protest in several quarters. The parliamentary proceedings, with that exception, were deeply impressive throughout. The demeanor of the country deserves the encomiums which the English press has bestowed. England is still ready to grant every measure of relief to Ireland, but the proposal to make Mr. Parnell head policeman has ceased to be possible.

POLICE PUZZLED.

Balger, arrested at Moville, has been released.

Rush, who was stated to have driven the car containing the murderers, is a car-owner; he was questioned as to whether any of his cars were missing, but without result. The police make no progress in the case.

Robert Dowdell has been arrested in Cork on the arrival of the train from Dublin on suspicion of being concerned in the Dublin murder. His face was scratched.

DUBLIN, May 15.—The assassins dispersed when the car returned to the stable on the night of the murder. The police merely suspect who the driver is. They have the man under surveillance and he may be arrested, but the detectives have no chance of bringing home his guilt unless an informer comes forward. The persons who witnessed the flight of the assassins have been shown the car, horse and suspected driver, but their evidence as to identity is conflicting and unsatisfactory.

THE REPRESSION BILL.

The text of the bill for the repression of crime is published. The alien clause contains the provision that aliens may be expelled from Ireland and may subsequently be expelled from Great Britain.

IRISH NEWS NOTES.

The Cork fund for the apprehension of the assassins is now five thousand dollars.

The car drivers of Dublin in a mass meeting have pledged themselves to aid in the discovery of the murderers of Cavendish and Burke.

Clifford Lloyd has arrived at Limerick. Extraordinary precautions are taken for his safety. The majority of the suspects will be released to-day.

The common council of London offers a reward of £500 for the conviction of the persons who placed the canister of powder on the railing at the Mansion house.

A considerable division of opinion exists among the Parnell members of the new coercion bill, several being in favor of withdrawing altogether from parliamentary discussion of the bill.

On the canister found on the railing of the Mansion house was an inscription charging the lord mayor and Irish landlords with being the principal recipients of the property defense fund.

State News.

What Shall we do with Chinese?

NEW YORK, May 15. At St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal church, in Forty-first street, in the evening, Rev. C. J. Harrower, pastor, preached, taking for his discourse the question, "What shall we do with Chinese?" He said it is an hour of vast monopolies in land, machinery, capital and franchises. The increase of population is something truly astonishing and in twenty years our population will equal that of the Russian empire. The effect of these conditions is observable upon diminishing marriage, the increase of vice and of the pauper class, and in the sensitiveness of skilled labor as to its rights. We must recognize the fact that no evil takes care of itself. Slavery, English supremacy in Ireland, Mormonism and intemperance all confirmed the fact. It is evident to my mind, then, that the importation of cheap labor of all sects, and Chinese especially, must be restricted. We are not willing to make ourselves the Botany bay of nations. What we must do is to distribute the Chinese. Imagine the presence of 300,000 Chinese in this city to compete for the street cleaning, cigar making, type setting and other forms of labor. When you have distributed them you can Christianize them. His religious instructions are all powerful; he looked to Christianity in the first of the 16th century, but prejudice stamped it out. The true remedy is to Christianize the Chinaman here and send him home with Christendom at his back. In the meantime keep your eye upon monopoly and its methods as never before. Preserve the traditions of our people, whose thrift and spirit are indicated in small deposits of savings banks and in insurance companies; and instead of causing Kearneys and giving full swing to foreigners flatter and indulge them less but watch them and love them more. We are all equal before God and colonists and the glory of this country is that there are riches and honor to the humblest of us.

Pacific Company Inquiry.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—The Cochet claim was the subject of inquiry to-day in the case of Jesse D. Mantrop, charged with embezzling 30,000 shares of stock in the Denver City Consolidated Mining company, and of disposing of the stock, and holding up to $400,000 belonging to Pete Hevener. Hevener testified that he negotiated for the purchase of the Cochet claim, value estimated at $1,000,000,000, in 1879. He found one of the heirs in Lima named Golacias Cochette, aged about 34 years. He obtained from a Mr. Landreau, the information that Galacias had a right to the claim as heir to his father, who discovered it. He made a contract with Galacias Cochette and then hunted up the record of his baptism. The registry set out that the son of Alexander Cochette and his wife Comanche, was baptized when one year old, by the name of Galacias, and witnesses named mentioned. Dr. Franklin Scott testified that he purchased a share of the Cochet claim from Hevener and sold the share to Shipherd.

Tangling Calculation.

ST. PAUL, May 15.—It is reported that C. D. W. Young, auditor of the Chicago, St. Paul and Omaha railroad, and Stewart Moore, chief clerk in the freight office of the Northern Pacific, both of St. Paul; and C. C. Gasseck, of Stackpole, were drowned in White Bear lake this morning. They went out in a boat, and have not been seen since. Two hats and a broken rudder have been found.

CHICAGO, May 15.—At 7 o'clock Sunday night, a sailing boat with eight persons capsized on Lake Calumet, and all were drowned. It was a pleasure craft, and the party on board consisted of Captain Bücklin, an old sea captain; two sons of 17 and 12 years; John Smith, foreman in the Pullman car department, and four unknown men. They went out for a pleasure ride against the warning of friends. A large number of persons witnessed the capsizing which occurred about a mile out, and a scene of terror ensued. Three boats were sent to the rescue, but though they got within hailing distance, the water was so rough that all they intended to rescue went down, and they themselves narrowly escaped. The bodies of Smith and one of the Bucklin boys were recovered.

Mining Market.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Mining stocks dull, with the exception of Robinson Consolidated, in which large business was done and which advanced from 2.40 to 2.85, closing at 2.60. Chrysolite declined from 4.90 to 4.60; State Lines Nos. 2 and 3 were dull at 38, and South Pacific at 19 and 20. Green Mountain was steady at 1.80 and 1.85; Stormont sold at 23; Ophir at 74. Total sales of the day 115,180 shares.

HORRIBLE DISCOVERY.

The Decomposed Body of a Woman Found in an Outhouse.

No Clue as to Who She is or How She Came to Her Death.

Yesterday afternoon about five o'clock Mr. E. L. Bennett, of the firm of Bennett Bros., visited one of his residences on the corner of Tejon and St. Vrain streets which has for the past two months been without a tenant. While walking in the rear of the yard surrounding the residence he noticed a very disagreeable odor and for a few moments he was at a loss to know what caused it.

As he approached the privy located in the rear of the lot the stench became stronger, and pushing open the door the first thing that came to his notice was a woman's dress and red shawl. He investigated no further at that time, but called Mr. P. S. Halleck, one of the neighbors, and they together opened the door further. What they then saw was sufficient to convince them that the decomposed remains of a dead woman lay within. Mr. Bennett came at once down town, notified Coroner Perkins, and they, in company with Mr. Ainsworth Brown and a GAZETTE reporter, returned to make certain that the horrible report was true. Even Mr. Bennett himself thought that he might be mistaken or that some one had perpetrated a joke on him. Sure enough, upon visiting the outhouse above described, the remains were found just in the position as stated by Mr. Bennett. Fully convinced that there was no room for doubt, Coroner Perkins came down town, summoned a coroner's jury and made other arrangements for the immediate disposal of the case. As such jury he summoned E. A. Beinstead, S. E. Sessions, T. W. Hull, Ainsworth Brown, E. L. Bennett and H. P. Scott.

Up to this time the remains had been undisturbed and left in the same position as discovered. All of the jurors being present a thorough examination of the body was made in the position in which it lay on the seat of the water-closet. From all appearances the woman had died as she lay in a comparatively comfortable position under the circumstances.

The face was in such an advanced stage of decomposition that not a single feature was recognizable. She was clothed rather neatly in a black alpaca dress and around her shoulders was loosely draped a red shawl. About her neck was a white lace collar gathered at the neck with a gold pin, while earrings of similar design were noticeable in the ears. Diligent search was made for anything by which the body could be identified, but without avail. In the skirt of the dress was a pocket, in which was found two silk handkerchiefs, a silver-plated knife and fork, a small leather purse containing a $5 bill and about $8.25 in silver coin, but nothing with any name on it.

While the search was in progress a pair of kid gloves fell from the folds of the dress upon the floor, also a silk handkerchief. In turning over the body for further investigation a neatly gloved hand was exposed to view, in which was tightly grasped a small two-ounce phial. It was with difficulty removed, and found to be nearly full of a dark liquid, and a label on the outside indicated it to be laudanum. This label showed that it had been purchased at the drug store of Messrs. Miller & Massey in this city. Nothing more being found that could throw the least light on the horrible mystery the body was placed in a box and removed to the undertaking rooms of Mr. A. L. Millard. In taking it from the position in which it lay the upper part of the remains were so badly decomposed that the head and neck fell from the shoulders.

The jurors were ordered to report at Millard's undertaking rooms, where the inquest was continued. Dr. Kimball was notified and made an examination of the remains as best he could with the condition that they were in. Among those who viewed the remains soon after they were transferred to the undertaking rooms were Messrs. A. J. Bletso and E. C. Atherton, of the Colorado Springs hotel, who both identified the body as that of a woman who had stopped at the house in February. She was there nearly three days when she left rather suddenly without paying her bill. She however left a small trunk in the room which she occupied and two boxes of household goods. According to the hotel register she arrived there on the evening of the 17th of February, from Denver, and although she did not register herself she gave the name of Mrs. Hinkin. Thinking that some clue to the name of the woman might be found in the trunk left, the jury in a body visited the hotel for the purpose of examining it, taking with them a key which, we neglected to say, was found in the purse. This key was found to fit the trunk exactly, thus further substantiating the proof that the dead woman and the one who visited the hotel on February 17th were one and the same person. The trunk was found to contain a large amount of nice linen, a silk dress and numerous other articles of wearing apparel and trinkets.

Although the pocket of every garment and all the apartments in the trunk were closely scrutinized, not a single letter or anything that would throw any light on the mystery could be found. Several tin-types and a photograph, the latter bearing the imprint of M. & W. Garrett, 240 Market street, Wilmington, Delaware, and numbered 8018. Neither Mr. Bletso nor Mr. Atherton thought this the picture of the woman in question.

The first witness sworn was Mr. Bennett, who testified to the finding of the remains. His evidence was substantially the same as that given in the introduction of this article.

Both E. C. Atherton and A. J. Bletso corroborated the facts as above given, and in addition testified that the woman while stopping at the house acted strangely and at times seemed to be wandering in her mind. After she left the house two letters were posted her to the address given on the register, but it was afterward ascertained that they had never been called for at the office. The woman was, however, seen on the street some two or three weeks after leaving the house.

Mr. J. H. Massey was called, and identified the label on the bottle of laudanum found in her hand as one which had come from his store, but he could not recall who the purchaser was.

W. J. Toliver, the porter at the Colorado Springs hotel, viewed the body, and was very confident that the woman was the same one who was at the house. He showed to the jury a box of collars, handkerchiefs, etc., which had been removed from the room the day after the woman left the house. One of the handkerchiefs had on it the name of Florence Riley.

Dr. Kimball testified as to the result of his examination. He found no outward appearances that the woman had died from violence. A handkerchief covering an ulcerated sore was wrapped about the left ankle. In his judgment the woman was from thirty-eight to forty years of age.

Mr. James Shannon did not testify, but in conversation with the GAZETTE reporter said he saw the same woman in an outhouse on the Wagner property on Tejon street some six weeks ago. She was at the time acting very strangely and was apparently under the influence of liquor. She declined to answer any questions asked her, and leaving the premises took a passing Hermie going to the southern part of the city. It is stated that she missed her the conveyance but returned and got out near where the body was found. After concluding the evidence the jury returned a verdict that the woman was to them unknown and died from causes unknown.

Egyptian Crisis.

LONDON, May 15.—It is stated that the Turkish admiralty has been ordered to prepare twelve ironclads and transports for sea service, in connection with the crisis in Egypt.

Lord Granville states the government's policy in regard to Egypt was maintenance of the sovereignty of the sultan and liberty to the Christian population. It was in accord with the French government which disclaimed the intention to abrogate any preponderating influence.

Trescott after Montero.

PANAMA, May 15.—Advices from Peru report that Trescott has gone into the interior in search of Admiral Montero. The journey is a hazardous one and part of the distance he must be carried on men's shoulders along narrow trails on dizzy mountain sides, with precipices and yawning depths below them. It is very doubtful whether he will be able to find Montero.

Chicago Water Bonds.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The city comptroller to-day disposed of the entire new issue of water loan bonds, amounting to $633,000, and bearing 3 63-100 per cent. interest, to the First National bank in a lump. The bank paid four-tenths of one per cent. premium for them.

It is difficult to know why the sermon on the Chinese question by the Rev Mr Hanover, of New York, should have been telegraphed all over the country. It gives no new information or arguments on the subject and is remarkable for nothing except its narrowness and the unchristian spirit it breathes.

Our Washington dispatches give some hints as to who the members of the tariff commission may be. The appointment of Mr Edward Atkinson is the best that could be made. He has studied most carefully and intelligently the various economic questions that have been discussed in this country. He has a rare faculty of gathering and combining the statistics on any subject he may discuss, and of drawing safe or accurate conclusions from them. With a few such members, the commission will make a report of real value to congress and facilitate the passage of a wise tariff bill.

Pennsylvania independent republicans have evidently determined on a bolt from the Cameron dictation. It is unfortunate that a bolt should be attempted under such inopportune circumstances. There can be no good reason given for not voting for Beaver except that Cameron supported him. Mr Marshall the candidate for congressman at large is a bitter anti-Conkling man and must be acceptable to the independents. He was a Greeley man in 1872 and he bolted his ticket openly again and again. There should be no futile attempts made to detect Cameron and this from present appearances is likely to be the case if any attempt is made.

The Hon E. C. Washburn who died Sunday belonged to the family of Washburns who have been so prominent in national affairs during the last thirty years. He was born in Livermore, Maine, in 1818 and was the youngest of the three brothers who were in congress together. He studied law and moved to Wisconsin from which state he was elected to congress in 1854 and served until the beginning of the war. During all this period his eldest brother the Hon Israel Washburn served with him, having served continuously since 1851. His elder brother, the Hon E. B. Washburn, also served with him, having been first elected in 1852, and served continuously to March, 1869. Mr Washburn immediately entered the army at the outbreak of the war and at its close had the rank of major general. He was again elected to congress serving from 1867-71. In 1872 he was elected governor of Wisconsin and served for two years. Since his term as governor expired in 1874 he has been engaged in the lumber business.

Mr Worthington has been confirmed as collector of the port of Boston. His future conduct will determine the extent of the unfortunate precedent that President Arthur will secure for himself in Massachusetts. It is almost parallel to the nomination of Simmons in 1874 by President Grant. The nomination was made then in the face of the protest of the congressional delegation. This of itself would have amounted to little if the nomination had been made for the good of the service. But it was not. It was made at the instance of General Butler, who wished to control the state patronage to aid in securing for him the nomination as governor. Simmons ran the office until Hayes became president as a political machine to aid the ambitions of Butler. This so disgusted the people of Massachusetts that had Grant run for a third term in 1876, he would have been overwhelmingly defeated in Massachusetts. It is thought Worthington is appointed for similar reasons. He has been long known as the champion of Butler in the republican press. He was also a strong third term man. The nomination is viewed with suspicion in Massachusetts, because Worthington has always stood with the minority of the party on a low plane and has usually affiliated with Butler and the Bummer crowd. If he attempts to repeat the history of the custom house under Simmons, he will injure Arthur in Massachusetts beyond measure. But aside from any civil service reform ideas, the nomination was an unwise one looking from Mr Arthur's own narrow standpoint. Mr Arthur has excused several appointments by saying that he thought that he ought to carry out the wishes of the majority of the party in the state in which the appointment was to be made. Now Worthington hardly represents a respectable minority of the party. Of the delegates elected to Chicago in 1880 only two were Grant-men, the other twenty-four were strongly anti-Grant. In this instance President Arthur has recognized an element of the party which was small and objectionable. Of course this cannot be defended from his standpoint, and shows that he will not be consistent where it is inconvenient. Again during the Conkling fight Arthur held that the president should advise with the senators, &c. This he did not do, but appointed Worthington in the face of their protest. One might go on with a long complaint, but the appointments made on such a low level were there consistency in it. But President Arthur to carry out his purposes has applied the hypocrite, and when criticised for it says with contemptible cant, that he is willing to be criticised. This is not manly or honest. If he means to say that the position he took with Conkling was wrong, and that hereafter he will not recognize sectional interests, he is saying what he does not say this and does not mean it. This appointment is one of the many evidences that Arthur intends to prostitute the civil service to not simply partisan, but factional purposes. He recognizes Cameron instead of Mitchell in Pennsylvania, because he says he feels it is to be his duty to recognize the majority of the party, but in Massachusetts he recognizes an insignificant minority. The simple fact is that he intends to recognize in each state only the stalwart faction be it small or large. This does not seem to have the manliness to say so.

The house of lords met on Easter Monday not at 4 instead of 5. The first day it sat twenty minutes, the second day thirty five—justifying Lord Beaconsfield's prediction when it was proposed to meet at the earlier hour, that their lordships instead of adjourning in time for dinner would now adjourn in time for 5 o'clock tea. The whole sittings for a week occupied almost an hour.

Stringer says the Jeunesse doree that care not for private dances in society are invariably attracted by the fascination of the ballet.

About an average it was decided by the town council of Edinburgh to expend the Scott monument fund surplus in filling up the still vacant niches with statuary. The requisite number, thirty or thereabouts, will cost from £[illegible] to £[illegible] apiece. Further there are about three feet high. Some of them are said to be very indicative in character. It must be remembered among the subjects are Oliver Cromwell, Helen Macgregor, Mary, William Shakspeare, Sir Walter Scott, Fair Maid of Perth, Rob Roy, Rowena and Ivanhoe.

Lord Cavendish's Ancestors

The ducal domain of Chatsworth, the pride of the Peak, embraces more than two thousand acres of the Duke of Devonshire's property in Derbyshire, which covers in all some ninety thousand acres of that rich and picturesque county. The estate was given by the Conqueror to his son, William Peverill, the founder of the family commemorated by Scott in one of his most romantic novels. It was bought in the reign of Elizabeth by Sir William Cavendish, a grandson of the slayer of Wat Tyler, who married the famous Bess of Hardwicke and left three splendid estates Chatsworth, Hardwicke Hall and Oldcotes—to his son the first Lord Cavendish and Earl of Devonshire. In 1702 his descendant, the first Duke of Devonshire, built the present palace of Chatsworth in the style of the Italian Renaissance. No private residence in the world compares with it on the whole in extent and in the splendor of its internal decorations and of the art-collections of all kinds which enrich it. The walls and ceilings were painted by Verrio and La Guerre, and it is a museum of the matchless wood carvings of Grinling Gibbons. Five successive ducal owners, each wealthier than his predecessors,—for the Cavendishes have been faithful to the prudent motto of their house ("Cavendo tutus")—have added to the treasures of Chatsworth, and the sixth duke though he passed as a rule but a small part of each year at this ancestral seat, spent millions upon its gardens and conservatories as well as upon its library, its picture gallery and the other collections—it contains. It is to this sixth Duke of Devonshire that the chief romance and mystery of the Cavendish family annals attaches. He inherited the title and estates as the son of the beautiful Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, the friend of Fox, who bought a butcher's vote at the Westminster election with a kiss. She was the "lady nursed in pomp and pleasure" to whom Coleridge paid so grand a tribute of undying verse, and in all respects one of the most remarkable women of her time. Tradition asserts that her only child was a daughter whom she exchanged at birth for the son of a friend. No one can tell between them. Be this as it may, her reputed son, through the hair of one of the greatest estates and most brilliant titles in Europe, and a man moreover distinguished for his personal gifts and graces, never inherited. Scandal averred that the secret of his birth was discovered by his cousin, the Earl of Burlington, the heir presumptive of the Devonshire title and estates, and that by a secret family compact it was settled that the sixth duke should be left in the undisturbed possession of the family property and the ducal honors on the condition that he should never marry. He spent his just income royally though not recklessly, and was a munificent patron of all the arts. It was said of him that he knew all the ballet-dancers and all the painters in Europe. But it was on his gardens that he lavished his wealth most freely. He discovered the rare genius of one of his gardeners, Joseph Paxton, and confided to him the construction of the first great conservatory ever built of glass and iron. This conservatory, nearly a thousand feet in length and six in one of the finest of its kind in the world, served as the model for the Crystal Palace, built in London for the first world's fair of 1851 under the presidency of Prince Albert. For his services in connection with this exhibition the duke's gardener was knighted, and passed into history as Sir Joseph Paxton. The galleries of Chatsworth contain notable works by Titian, Tintoretto, Murillo, Claud, Vandyke, Reynolds and Teniers, a magnificent collection of drawings by the great masters, and many famous statues. The sixth duke died in 1858, when the dukedom and the estates devolved on his kinsman, the earl of Burlington now in his seventy-second year, and long known as one of the most modest, accomplished and high minded noblemen in Great Britain, a man of rare scientific attainments and a most enlightened friend of letters.

Lawson's Madness

London Standard April 2

When Mr Austin from the office of Mr Mills the convicts solicitor visited that at Wandsworth jail yesterday he found that the condemned man had written an elaborate account of his experience of the mental and moral metamorphoses caused in him by the long continued use of morphia and atropia. Lawson in his communication says he did not use the first drug alone but in combination with the latter, not as has been supposed to counteract the contracting effect of morphia upon the pupils of the eye, but because it and only enhanced the effects of morphia as a stimulant and narcotic, but also because it quite or nearly overcame the sickness caused by the morphia. The habit became formed from its having been first injected hypodermically by a physician to relieve pain. I then took it myself, having considerable work to attend to, and in order to brace myself for professional duties when in pain. After a short time it became absolutely necessary to repeat the injections more frequently, not only to lull the pain but to lull the nervous and general physical irritability, which often amounted to actual pain of a heavy rheumatic character in the head and limbs principally, which occurred when the general effects had nearly or quite disappeared. Of course, very soon the dose had to be larger and it required a surprisingly large amount to produce sleep or even serious drowsiness. Usually the injection had to be repeated within three-quarters of an hour to do this, and then the sleep was of very short duration and after the habit had existed some time it left the faculties mental and physical in a most peculiar and indescribable state for some hours. But the physical results though severe and horrible, to look back upon were comparatively trifling, when the moral and mental results are considered. The whole aspect of everything became strangely and completely turned about. When in the condition above alluded to after the narcotic effect had evanesced the whole life was as far as physical motions and the instincts are concerned mechanical and the mind full of the vaguest and most horrid fancies and hallucinations, fearful worries and troubles however slight, became fertile in their awfulness, and anticipations were even more dreadful and horrible. The imagination seemed to pierce years into the future and colossal successes or failures imaginary would either cause a rush of warm feeling, and joy which would even cause speech to be uttered and hot tears of the pride or pondency impossible to realize. While in the abnormal state alluded to the most unaccountable things would be said, done and thought of. Everything caused one's own particular right, a complete inability to draw distinctions between truth and falsehood the real and those ideals which became realities right and wrong, a loss of the knowledge of time and distance in fact, to every great extent the power of distinguishing or discriminating a tendency, quite unconquerable to put off things (procrastination is one trait, perhaps, of the disease), my memory for name, dates and events of daily life which was when in my normal condition unusually good almost annulled. In all an absolute demoralizing, demoralizing, demoralizing result, and with a firm conviction that in a few days I should discontinue the habit but the day never came. The greatest difficulty in procuring the instruments and solution and the purchase thereof and when I had at last one of two injections after coming to bed then an hour or two sleep, then in that peculiar condition I have endeavored to describe either to get up and wander aimlessly about unconsciously, sometimes about the house sometimes in the street, the strange fancies always more real at night. In New York I would rise at any hour of the night or early morning and hanging all sorts of extraordinary things I cannot now fully recall in detail, especially when President Garfield died and stopped at an all night coffee house for slight refreshment, ice cream or the like and then return to my room, or else I would read and always some highly exciting story which became at once reality to me, and then exhausted, when nearly time for rising, would sink to uneasy sleep, fully believing I was to carry on myself the events of the narrative. When I awoke, generally in other injection, a slight one in the morning and then one soon before getting up (which I always did very late when alone) would produce twenty or thirty minutes half unconscious sleep and then rising would continue the remainder of the day and evening in the state of mental absence and physical presence I have mentioned. When alone (and I always sought solitude for the greater part of the time, the presence of others in a measure interfering with the portentous and vast work the diseased brain was doing) I took neither breakfast nor lunch, but the only meal in the twenty four hours was a late dinner with a very little wine or beer. Whether all this was the result of morphia on a brain always easily disturbed (delirium in the highest degree, &c) from early years or the brain effects of atropia, the effect of which I was fully and often painfully conscious of in the dryness of throat, rendering swallowing almost impossible, and great impairment of sight from the dilated pupils, or the combination of all I cannot say. I know these vague general outlines of the past are the results of something, but I can dimly distinguish certain acts and doings, but there were many things I did and said which were afterwards told me that I knew and know nothing, whatever to my own recollection. I am firmly of the belief, vague strange sensations existing even now, that it might be of some service to science were a scientific and pathological post-mortem held after my death. My relatives would probably not raise any objection to this.

Curious Complication

A curious robbery complication has just been unravelled at Mt Vernon, Ind A year ago last January Dr Spencer of that town was knocked down and robbed A considerable number of persons were arrested on suspicion among them four men named Moore, Kemper, Reed and Morgan The one last named was a hard character, who was known to have been in town the night of the robbery, but left the next morning and was finally caught on an island in the Mississippi When Moore's trial came on last November however Morgan surprised everybody by giving a perfectly clear account of the robbery which he claimed to have seen from across the street, and with his testimony and some circumstantial evidence Moore was convicted and sentenced for fourteen years Upon the same evidence Reed was the other day given eight years, but in the trial of Kemper the witness was cross examined sharply for the first time and under the questioning he broke down completely and confessed that he and a man named Phenix committed the crime alone It seems that Morgan had carefully looked up facts about the three accused men with a view to throwing the robbery upon them and told a story to fit exactly with what he knew could be proved by others

A Broken Plate

New York Sun

The little town of Gubbio the home of majolica has been in commotion during the last few weeks, owing to the sale of the collection of the Duke Marchese Ranghiacci, one of the great private collections of Italy The great interest of the sale centered in a magnificent plate by Mastro Giorgio signed in full, "1528, Mastro Giorgio di Gubbio" The centre of the plate represents the supper, with Mary Magdalen washing the feet of our Saviour, and the border of dark blue ground has griffins and arabesques with the arms of Dalla Rovere The plate is well known and has been described by Passeri It is broken in two and very roughly mended, but its very mending is historical, so that it is left as it is For this plate there was great competition The government sent an agent Signor Castellani was represented and there were many foreign buyers Finally the plate went for $ 600 to Signor Giacomini of Rome

What She Took in Here

Springfield Republican

There was displayed near the soda water fountain, in an uptown drug store, the sign "Boylos Vaccine" A young man accompanied by a young woman, who might have been his country cousin or sweetheart, entered, and in response to the inquiring look of the boy who tended the fountain, said "You may give me bovine" The young woman's eye had been resting on the unusual sign near the fountain, and when her companion turned to her and asked how she would have hers, she said timidly "I'll try a little vaccine"

Seats for Hazel Kirke sold very rapidly yesterday and a large house is assured on Wednesday night.

The Hazel Kirke company will come from Pueblo via the D. & N. O. and Nichols coaches to-morrow afternoon.

Col. E. A. Buck, of the New York Spirit of the Times and proprietor of the Gunnison News-Democrat, is in the city.

Until further notice the trains going to Manitou at 11:20 p. m., and coming from Manitou at 10:45 p. m., have been discontinued.

The lecture at the college this evening will begin at 8 o'clock. The subject is "The Parthenon." The architecture and sculptures of this edifice will be fully illustrated.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Roby have extended invitations for a parlor conference to be held at their residence this evening at eight o'clock in the interest of the Y. M. C. A. of this city.

Captain Lovell started out yesterday on the Manitou park round-up. He will visit all the cattle grazing districts in the mountains and expects to reach Ed Smith's ranch by June 8th.

Mr. W. H. Bancroft is now acting superintendent of the first division of the Denver and Rio Grande, in place of M. C. Kimberly resigned. He still continues as superintendent of that branch of the road running between Pueblo and Antonito.

Quite a large number of the Colorado Springs people flocked to the depot to see the first broad gauge train pass through the city. The first train passed through at 10:15 a. m. in charge of Conductor Hilton, and the afternoon train south was in charge of Conductor Riley.

Weatherby Bros. have concluded to close their business here, and advertise in another column to sell their stock of goods at very low figures. They have a large variety to select from, and no better opportunity to buy goods cheap has been offered in Colorado Springs in some time. Call and see them.

Manager Nye returned from Denver on the morning express yesterday. He had a very satisfactory conference with Manager Bush and is satisfied that he is doing all he can to provide Colorado Springs with the best of theatrical attractions. All of the best companies that visit Denver will also come to Colorado Springs.

Messrs. Bacon & Carr have assumed control of the Colorado Springs transfer business, and will hereafter run the busses and deliver baggage to hotels and private houses. The free transportation of passengers to and from the depot to the hotels has ceased. All orders for bus calls left them will receive prompt attention.

County Assessor McGovney wishes us to give notice that all tax schedules must be filled out and returned to him on or before the 20th of May. This request applies to the non-owners as well as the owners of property in the county. Those failing to make proper return on or before the above date will be listed by the assessor.

Mr. E. H. Betts, the operator at the Western Union telegraph office, was thrown from a vicious horse which he was riding on Sunday, and sustained serious injury to the wrist of the left hand. It was at first thought that he had broken it, but we are glad to state that beyond a rupture to one of the blood-vessels the injuries are not so bad as was feared.

Mr. H. L. Marston has as large and nice stock of gas fixtures as were ever brought to the city. Among the many other novelties in fixtures, which he is now making a specialty of, are those which can be adapted to either gas or oil. These will be found very convenient for those buildings where there is no gas now but where they eventually contemplate introducing it.

The following programme will be presented at the social given by the "Woman's Christian Temperance Union" this evening at the Congregational church: Quartette, Messrs. Barber, Holmes, Mulholland and Spencer; recitation, May Days, Miss Merritt; solo, Miss Cowgill; recitation, How Ruby Played, Miss Alice Baker; solo, Come Back to Erin, Miss Tinie Adams; reading, Mrs. L. E. Sherman; solo, Mrs. H. L. Parker; recitation, Miss Belle Older; quartette, Gathering Home, Mrs. Draper and Mrs. Parker, and Misses Adams and Cowgill.

On Saturday night shortly after 3 o'clock, Mrs. Wm. Fernsworth, who resides near the corner of Pike's Peak avenue and Weber street, was awakened by a noise in the house. She called for a block and tackle which always stays in the house, and as she did so some one turned a dark lantern onto her face. Somewhat frightened she again called for the boy, who [illegible] and ran a shot and fired. About the same time a revolver in the hands of the burglar was discharged, whether accidentally or purposely is not known. Mrs. Fernsworth's daughters, who were sleeping in an adjoining room, were awakened by the report and immediately gave an alarm, which brought to the rescue Mr. George Collins, and other neighbors. He tried to effect an entrance through the back door, which was locked, but he was entering a window in the rear of the house the burglar made his escape through the front door. It was afterward learned that the burglar had gained entrance to the house by turning the key in the front door with fingers. With the exception of one pair of bracelets no property was stolen. Mr. Fernsworth at the time was absent in Denver.

On the same night the residence of Mr. T. A. Hoy on North Nevada avenue was entered and a gold watch and chain, valued at $160, and some other jewelry was stolen. The police have not as yet any clue that will lead to the arrest of the thieves.
